

The FCC should not implement any proposal that would lessen Indiana's Telephone Privacy law protections. Indiana's Telephone Privacy law has improved my families time at home. It has been so nice to have a family dinner hour without harrassing telephone calls. Homework time is now possible because my children are not distracted by telephone calls that they are sure are for them, but actually are just another marketing call. We are now beginning to respect the telephone again, in the past its ring was just something to ignore. Now when the phone does ring we know it is someone calling that we would like to talk to. Please don't destroy the family time we have just begun to take for granted.
